

Peace on the Agenda in Pretoria and Washington

Failure to arrive at a peaceful settlement has led to much suffering in the Middle East. Since fighting began last September, 431 Palestinians and 72 Israelis have been killed.

There appears to be a disagreement between Israel's foreign minister S Peres and Prime Minister Sharon on the question of how far Arafat can be held responsible for recent violence. Until the setting up of Israel's Unity government two months ago, the two had taken different approaches to the issue. While Peres often speaks of the need to resume peace talks, Sharon insists there will be no negotiations until the violence ends.

Although Sharon has repeatedly held Arafat responsible for militant attacks, the fact remains that while Arafat leads the Fatah movement, the other 3 radical Islamic organizations, which have consistently opposed Israeli/Palestinian peace negotiations, are not under his control.

In Washington on Thursday Peres and Bush discussed the truce plan proposed by Egypt and Jordan and on the same day in Pretoria, South Africa, Arafat in a speech to the Non-Aligned Movement nations declared his full commitment to the truce plan.

However, the current Israeli government sees the E-J plan as being one-sided.

Escalation-oriented		De-escalation-oriented
H	1	Peace on the Agenda in Pretoria and Washington
1	1	Failure to arrive at a peaceful settlement has led to much suffering in the Middle East.
1	2	Since fighting began last September, 431 Palestinians and 72 Israelis have been killed.
2	1	There appears to be a disagreement between Israel's foreign minister S Peres and Prime Minister Sharon on the question of how far Arafat can be held responsible for recent violence.
2	2	Until the setting up of Israel's Unity government two months ago, the two had taken different approaches to the issue
2	3	While Peres often speaks of the need to resume peace talks, Sharon insists there will be no negotiations until the violence ends.
3	1	Although Sharon has repeatedly held Arafat responsible for militant attacks, the fact remains that while Arafat leads the Fatah movement, the other 3 radical Islamic organizations, which have consistently opposed Israeli/Palestinian peace negotiations, are not under his control.
4	1	In Washington on Thursday Peres and Bush discussed the truce plan proposed by Egypt and Jordan and on the same day in Pretoria, South Africa, Arafat in a speech to the Non-Aligned Movement nations declared his full commitment to the truce plan
5	1	However, the current Israeli government sees the E-J plan as being one-sided